

Figure 1. Clockwise from left: Juvenile yelloweye rockfish entering a crevice between two large boulders, a giant boulder that destroyed a bottom trawl survey net during the 2008 eastern Bering Sea slope survey, and a piece of a bottom trawl survey net hanging from a boulder (still image extracted from underwater video).